

“Woman” redirects here. For other uses, see Woman (disambiguation).

“Everything is female in the dark” – Christie Anne Reynolds a kind of othering rip-throated grit-mouthed volatile rising of the underneath [she bansheed her heart in the transitive] trace of finger down spine she, sugared

she, honey-thighed the gaping and then the swelling shut

*he said I was a thing to be played with a thing a pretty thing for his amusement he took me he took me from behind and afterward he asked me what it felt like to be a woman I really wouldn't know I said

vultured by he [a who to her that] and yet complicator of himness she: catastrophe of limb she: an array of whispertruths she: the cliché of a body that loves only wrongly, of a body to be wrecked against she: a mouth that says yes and not enough

*he said I was a thing to be played with a thing a pretty thing for his amusement he took me he took me from behind and afterward he asked me what it felt like to be a woman I really wouldn't know I said

::her sex a matter of equivalency::an equation most of the time::

body + performance = _____ in bed with rumination/ruination [unintelligible] the cute of the lie of skin and slit and the sour musking of lady play [carrioned and carried on with] she unbuttons at the fractal and all the light goes stuttering sour-cherried she speaks burnt through her murmurous and unmathable problem

[a complete disfigurement of the line] girl as adverb as habit as truant light as fishless waters dressy in her smallness disastrous in her cusping a starring—meaning a blemishing (something ugly with the capacity for shine) *he said I was a thing to be played with a thing a pretty thing for his amusement he took me he took me from behind and afterward he asked me what it felt like to be a woman I really wouldn't know I said lorded over or captured or captained or captioned she is afterimage false and false and false and

glowing she wears the dark she wears her dark her totality is the unworded kind of loneliness the unnameable innermost point of her the innermost point of her deeper in yet

and deeper still

note the potential for excess in her echoing*