I always wanted to start

Megan Burns
i always wanted to start over

Megan Burns

Dusie Kollektiv / Nous-zōt Press i always wanted to start over

by Megan Burns
Copyright 2014

Nous-zōt Press All rights revert to author.

Cover design and layout: Zeke KalishReed Nous-zōt chop design: Zeke KalishReed

Editor: Marthe Reed

nouszotpress@gmail.com nouszot.blogspot.com
i always wanted to
start over
“If a line within the stanza is likened to an utterance, it is meditative and fuses sense even as it differentiates syntax”

—Marjorie Welish
why this the invisible skin sprung to simple still life he is one way of looking through and through what you might have done think audacity point at the wide waste of option a how are you reading me today i hear you saying & i hear you say do you have trouble

at the draw

    o nigh

tender button
where knubbed raw bite

you back earthward, little critter i’ve a way of swallowing a tail a divorcing of sound

from form
light against how we know it aware i’m the wolf front cover of the jacket confession

dark pencil lines

because i instinctively learn to draw back center guarded

wobbling planet
weak axis
a turn over
heart hearing two pieces: how do you happen da single scroll this implement adorned darklystained for instance: the scale of invention till this from its contaminated source easiest forgetting portrait this schism any small detail could be said to hold a tipping over brided target     regret’s outline this black, black no bloom or branching could you, could felt i can’t any more casual this frozen hour you think a letting down ghosted façade

how husked to the young take childhood and turn a grafting against ruins her naked body    headless then darkness

so messy you hold your breath underwater
just on the skinning

a seize of throat
i read the writing when if ever we are not at war when you don’t stop at the oasis light does not refract break language or bulk it stretched resistance infinitely, you marker
you left off
never not broken
crowding of scars defined by what is not his life’s work

damaging of love
since the first cut woman: a variety of poses

think you can part what was brought whole world to me

three bodies
grew inside me
warped cagework
hooks against sinking

not afraid i stay open

fill the space left by leaving in this particular past

tell the children
mommy is sick

the story will be told as such so sick

they waver fading
dangerous fiction

hold this document
hold this line

words fail much less than we think

you can say enough meadowsweet feverfew

take a drowning as evidence of

it is never safe to say a record of your fears you stand in your life waiting to prove you can to be a kind of mother that doesn't exist

repeat “What is remembered in the body is well remembered”
-Elaine Scarry

the deepest abyss
three bodies
stolen
sight/ touch/ sound disappear
as if dead
held in abeyance he says: i’ve decided you’re unfit
there is no
resurfacing
what choice
do you have soil gone sour
city closed coupling
a sway

clear reluctant tunes crisp necessary beauty

spit in the palm, shoot in the heel try not to try float this caress, this careless drunk       these damp lies a sipping of throated silence tangled, stony face arm numb under the sleeping weight bed pissed / this was the way the house was built

poems
not human not a better monster made labored draft & when you stop loving the other

he steals the proper word

to show you
nothing is sacred

the world turns on this war

this split

remember this translation built shadows

once i felt the lure